"The Stuff That Dreams Are Made On is a clear, straightforward treatment- free of academic and psychoanalytic jargon- of Jungian literary criticism. Snider's introduction is not only a first-rate exposition of Jungian literary theory, but a lucid explanation of Jungian psychology as well. Particularly valuable is his chapter on Carson McCullers. All in all, a solid piece of critical work." -David Peck, professor of English and American Studies, author of Novels of Initiation
