Redbone: A Novel of Sex, Love, Betrayal, and Murder Sandra Dickerson

Redbone: A Novel of Sex, Love, Betrayal, and Murder What happens when a Black woman from the South Side of Chicago crashes the glass ceiling? Dr. Mary Louise Brisbane, has achieved an Ivy League education. This represents an enormous achievement since neither of her parents have a high school graduation. Her father, John Paul Brisbane is a junk man. Her mother has never worked and receives disability. As the story commences, Dr. Brisbane soon becomes engaged to Hammond Oglesby, an attorney, who is from an old moneyed black family in North Carolina. Hammond's family lineage can be traced back generations to "Black Walls Street." His family wealth ranges in the multi millions. Hammond's mother immediately rejects Mary Louise as a new money arrival who has no breeding. The story line thickens when it is revealed that Dr. Brisbane still clings to her high school sweetheart Eldridge Paige, aka "Redbone." Redbone is a lieutenant in a South Side Chicago gang called the "Chiefs." Redbone knows Dr. Brisbane's underbelly and Hammond knows only what he views of his fiancé on the surface. In many places the story contains graphic descriptions of lustful sex, greed, betrayal and murder.
